

31/03/2020

The first female tawny mining bee of the season.

Alan Kenworthy and Maya Chaterjee

31/03/2020

An unidentified bee troughing on a dandelion (please let them flower!)

Alan Kenworthy and Maya Chaterjee

31/03/2020

Hiding under the bushes, my trillium has one more bloom most years, slow but sure.

Gill Buttle

31/03/202

Spot the bumble bee on my early deciduous azalea.

Gill Buttle

31/03/2020

This is a little clump of Glory-of-the-snow nestling under the budding fronds of our weeping birch. I see their official title is Scilla section Chionodoxa, which is a bit of a mouthful. Anyway, I can't identify the species because these flowers have a pronounced median line on the petals that I haven't seen in any photographs. Can anyone help to identify them?

Ian Andrews

31/03/2020

Yesterday evening in Guestling Wood... the anemones seem to go on forever!!

Carol Glasson

31/03/2020

There are a lot of primroses in the woods this year too.

Carol Glasson